Responsibility

Tired of reminding your child...Homework? Cleaning their room? Picking up? Wouldn't it be great if they just did it on their own?

Responsibility is the trait of being answerable to someone for something or being responsible for one's conduct. This means the child is in charge of his or her choices, the consequences of those choices, how they respond in every situation, and their personal belongings. Do not feel like you need to "water it down" for younger children. They can understand and often will surprise you how eager they are to take charge of some of their own life.

*Ways to apply at home:

They can begin to take charge of what is going on in their own life by:

- *Getting up, getting dressed, and eating breakfast by the time to leave for school.
- *Helping with household chores without reminders.
- *Doing homework on time and keeping school work in order.
- *Taking care of his or her laundry.

*Set clear expectations and then let them succeed!

Have you ever been frustrated by an assignment you were expected to complete without clear instructions? It can feel the same to your kids. Even if you have done this before, review and clarify.
